

Fall Asleep While We... Superheroes

Title options + a 2h15 talk bank · built 4 Sep 2026 · for Blissolic + friend

THE ONE CHANGE THAT MATTERS MOST

Your draft says “talk about superheroes”. In this niche that exact shape is the measured failure mode — Down To Sleep’s open-ended Ask Me Anything did 35 views/day against 284 and 1,084 for their structured videos. Swap the verb for one that promises a result: settle, rank, fix, decide, ruin. Costs you nothing — you record the same two hours, you just frame it as a job you finish.

TWO QUICK FLAGS BEFORE YOU HIT RECORD

1. Spelling: it is superheroes, not “superheros”. Easy one to ship by accident. 2. Parkour sits mid-table on the activity ladder (build-tycoon ran 2,212 views/day, crime and chaos 9,374, cozy farming 104). It is fine — but give it stakes you can say out loud in the first minute (“hardest parkour map, we are not stopping until we beat it”). A parkour map you are losing to is a story; a parkour map you are wandering through is a screensaver.

Title options

Ranked. Char count in the last column — yours was 69 and truncates in search on mobile. Under ~55 is safe. All keep the format the niche actually rewards: Fall Asleep While We [verb] [thing].

#	TITLE	WHY	CHARS
1	Fall Asleep While We Settle Every Marvel vs DC Argument PICK	“Settle” = a job with an end. “Every” justifies the 2h15 runtime instead of it looking like padding. Marvel vs DC is the single biggest search phrase in this space.	55
2	Fall Asleep While We Argue About Marvel and DC	Safest version. Zero cleverness, format-perfect, reads instantly at thumbnail size. Use this if you want the least risk.	46
3	Fall Asleep While We Rank Every Superhero	Ranking is the strongest structure in the niche — the listener always knows where they are. Only pick it if you actually do a running list.	41
4	Fall Asleep While We Decide Who Would Actually Win	Pure conflict framing without naming a franchise. Travels beyond Marvel/DC fans.	50
5	Fall Asleep While We Ruin Your Favorite Superheroes	Closest thing to the chaos lever that a talking video can get. Slight bait risk. US spelling deliberately — “favourite” halves the search pool.	51
6	Fall Asleep While We Fix the MCU	Shortest, punchiest, and “fix” is the best verb here. Narrower — drops DC entirely.	32
7	Fall Asleep While We Break Down Every Superhero Fight	Signals detail and length. Slightly dry, but honest about what the video is.	53
8	Fall Asleep While We Play Parkour and Argue About Marvel	Closest to your draft, but “Minecraft” cut and “talk about” upgraded to “argue”. Keeps the activity visible.	56
9	Fall Asleep to 2 Hours of Superhero Arguments	The other legal variant of the format. Puts the runtime up front, which this audience is actively shopping for.	45

#	TITLE	WHY	CHARS
10	Fall Asleep While We Argue About Superheroes for 2 Hours	Belt and braces — format, topic and runtime. Longest of the set; right at the truncation line.	56

WHERE MINECRAFT GOES

Not in the title. The research was blunt on this: Minecraft is fine as the engine and useless as the hook — nobody searches for it in this niche, and it eats the characters your real hook needs. Put it in the first line of the description and in the thumbnail, where it costs you nothing.

How to run the two hours

- Energy decays on purpose. Arguments and fights up front while people are still awake; lore and storytelling from ~1:40 as they drift. Never the other way round.
- No spikes. No shouting, no sudden laughs, no clapping the desk. A laugh that peaks 8 dB over the talk wakes the listener, and the whole product is that they do not wake up.
- Record two separate mic tracks so the edit can hard-limit each of you independently. This is the one thing a duo has to get right and it is fixed at record time, not after.
- Never address the listener's state. No “are you still awake”, no “wake up”, no “still with us?”
- Say the premise in the first 30 seconds, plainly, in the title's own words. Then stop doing intro. No channel pitch, no sub beg at the front.
- Do not go silent for more than ~10 seconds, but do not rush either. Dead air reads as a broken video; speed reads as a podcast.
- Sign off quiet. No outro music, no loud “smash that like”. Trail off and let it end.
- Skip freely. There are ~115 prompts below for 135 minutes. You will not use them all — that is the point. Never force a prompt that is not landing.

The talk bank — 9 segments, 135 minutes

0:00 - 0:12

1. Warm-up

12 min

Low stakes. Purpose is to establish both voices so the listener can tell you apart with their eyes shut. Soft, no arguing yet.

1. First superhero you ever loved — and do you still?
2. First comic book film you saw in a cinema.
3. Marvel or DC, honestly — and is that about the comics or the films?
4. Which hero do you actually relate to, not just like?
5. Which hero would you be catastrophically bad at being?
6. Have either of us read an actual comic, or is it all films and YouTube?
7. The superhero take you are most embarrassed about.
8. Best theme music in either universe.
9. Which costume would you genuinely wear in public?
10. If you got powers tomorrow, would you tell anyone? Who first?
11. Worst superhero name ever committed to print.
12. Most overrated hero — say it now so we can spend two hours on it.

0:12 - 0:32

2. Who Would Actually Win

20 min

Highest-energy block, so it goes early. Every one of these is infinitely extendable — if a matchup is going well, stay on it and cut three others.

1. Superman vs Thor.
2. Batman vs Iron Man, both with a week of prep.
3. Hulk vs Doomsday.
4. Scarlet Witch vs Raven.
5. The Flash vs Quicksilver — and is it even close?
6. Spider-Man vs Nightwing.
7. Captain America vs Green Arrow.
8. Doctor Strange vs Doctor Fate.
9. Thanos vs Darkseid.
10. Deadpool vs Deathstroke.
11. Aquaman vs Namor.
12. Punisher vs Red Hood.
13. Full Justice League vs full Avengers, no prep, neutral ground.
14. Where exactly does the “Batman with prep time” argument break? Name the fight he loses.
15. Which hero would win a fight they have absolutely no business winning?
16. Pick the most one-sided matchup you can think of and defend the underdog anyway.

Structure block. Say the list out loud as you build it and re-state it at the end — a listener half-asleep needs the recap more than the reasoning.

1. Rank the six original Avengers by how useful they actually are in a real fight.
2. Rank every live-action Batman.
3. Rank every live-action Spider-Man.
4. Rank every Joker.
5. Rank the Infinity Stones by how badly they break a story.
6. Top five you want on your side in a bar fight — no flying, no lasers.
7. Top five for a heist.
8. Worst Justice League member of all time.
9. Best hero and sidekick pairing.
10. Rank the MCU phases, and say when it stopped working for you.
11. Rank the DCEU films, worst to best.
12. Best rogues gallery — Batman, Spider-Man or the Flash?
13. Rank the X-Men by power ceiling, then re-rank them by actual usefulness. Different list?
14. Rank the Robins.

Everyone has takes here, which is why it belongs in the first half while people are still arguing back at their screen.

1. How would you fix the DCEU, starting from Man of Steel?
2. Was Snyder right? Genuinely, not as a bit.
3. What did the MCU actually lose after Endgame?
4. Recast the entire Justice League, right now.
5. Which film is closest to its source comic — and does that even matter?
6. One death you would undo.
7. One death that should have stuck and did not.
8. Which major hero has never had a good film?
9. Best comic book TV show — and is TV beating film now?
10. Should Marvel drop the multiverse entirely?
11. What is the correct way to make a Batman film in 2026?
12. Which actor was miscast on paper and somehow worked anyway?
13. Which villain got completely wasted on screen?
14. The film you defend that nobody else does.

Start bringing the volume down here. Villains are a naturally slower, more analytical conversation than fight picks.

1. Best written villain in either universe, and why writing beats power.
2. Which villain was actually right?
3. Killmonger and Thanos both get called "right" — where does each one break?
4. The Joker: still frightening, or completely overexposed?
5. Lex Luthor — genius, or the pettiest man alive?
6. Which villain would you least want to actually meet?
7. Which hero would make the best villain?
8. Dumbest villain plan that somehow still worked.
9. Loki, Magneto, Harley — which redemption was earned and which was just popularity?
10. Most underrated villain in either universe.
11. Which villain should have won, and what happens next if they do?
12. Doctor Doom — where does he actually rank?
13. Best villain design, purely visually.
14. Is a villain who wins ever a satisfying ending?

The best sleep material in the whole document. Detailed, slightly absurd, zero emotional stakes. Go slow and let the tangents run.

1. How does Ant-Man's mass actually work? Pick a version and commit.
2. Why does the Flash not simply solve every problem in one second?
3. Superman has no power ceiling — is that a character or a writing problem?
4. How does Spider-Sense work, mechanically? What does it warn him about and what does it miss?
5. What are the real limits of a Green Lantern ring?
6. Time travel: Endgame's rules vs Flashpoint's. Which is more consistent with itself?
7. Would any of Batman's gadgets survive contact with physics?
8. Is the Hulk's anger a power or a limiter?
9. Does Wolverine age? What actually kills him?
10. Most broken power that nobody complains about.
11. A power that sounds incredible and would ruin your life within a week.
12. Invisibility, flight or super strength — one, for real, forever.
13. Why does a domino mask work? Why does nobody recognise anyone?
14. Who pays for the property damage? Seriously — follow the money.
15. Secret identities in a world with phones — is it even possible any more?

Change the format here. One of you narrates a story start to finish, the other only reacts. This is the block people fall asleep in, so it is the most valuable one — slow, quiet, no crosstalk.

1. Tell the story of The Infinity Gauntlet, properly, from the start.
2. Explain Crisis on Infinite Earths as simply as it can possibly be explained.
3. The Death of Superman, beginning to end.
4. Knightfall — how Bane actually broke Batman, and why it took months.
5. Civil War in the comics vs the film. Different story, same name.
6. Secret Wars — both versions.
7. The Court of Owls.
8. Old Man Logan.
9. The Killing Joke — and why it is still argued about.
10. Injustice — walk through exactly how Superman falls.
11. One More Day — the worst Spider-Man story ever written, and how it happened.
12. The Long Halloween.
13. What is the Speed Force, really?
14. Explain the multiverse to someone who has never heard the word.
15. Where did the Green Lantern Corps come from?

Keep it soft and personal, not competitive. These are "drift off mid-answer" questions.

1. You get one power, but everyone knows it is you. Still take it?
2. A hero with no powers, or a civilian in a world that is safe — which life?
3. You wake up as Batman. First thing you do?
4. Would you take the super soldier serum, knowing what it did to everyone else?
5. Which universe would you actually want to live in? Not visit — live.
6. The ring picks you. Do you put it on?
7. Ten years of Peter Parker's life, or one year of Tony Stark's?
8. Would you use a time stone for something small and personal?
9. Your city gets exactly one hero. Pick.
10. Build a five-person team, any universe, one rule: no Superman.
11. Which hero would be a nightmare to be friends with?
12. Which hero would be the best flatmate?

No debate. Agree with each other. Volume down, pace down, and let it stop rather than end.

1. The most comforting superhero moment you can think of.
2. A moment that genuinely got you, and you would not admit it out loud normally.
3. What are superheroes actually for?
4. Which one would you want watching over you while you sleep?
5. Agree on a top three. No arguing. Just say them.
6. Trail off. No outro, no music, no sub beg.

IF YOU RUN SHORT

Go back to segment 2 and run more matchups — it is the only block with unlimited fuel, and by then the audience that is still awake is the one that wants it. If you run long, cut segment 8; it is the most droppable.

Built from the views-per-day analysis at blissolicpy.github.io/sleep-channel-report/now/ · segment timings sum to exactly 135 min · ~115 prompts